

Look & Listen

Scavenger Hunt

In Port Warwick,

there are 5 sculptures,
4 of which you can easily
walk to.

1. "Natural" by Masaru Bando
2. "Melpomene" by Romolo Del Deo
3. "Il Segreto" by Emanuele De Reggi
4. "Lenape Gate" by Harry H. Gordon

Port Warwick was built in 2001, and was named after the fictional town in author William Styron's book "Lie Down in Darkness." Styron named the streets after his favorite American writers, and chose the quotes on the base of "Natural."

The 5th sculpture is
"Spring Breeze"
by Rodney Carroll,
located at the Jefferson Ave.
entrance to Port Warwick.

Look

Can you find:

- Someone missing a head? _____
- A combined man and horse? _____
- What is that mythological creature called? _____
- A sculpture you can walk through? _____
- A fish? _____
- A wing? _____
- Hair blowing in the wind? _____
- Quotes from books? _____
- What happens if you tap near the holes in "Lenape Gate"?
_____

Listen

Download our free app and listen to the sculptors talk about their works.

Do you hear:

Harry H. Gordon, sculptor of "Lenape Gate," is not only a sculptor, but also a public art installer. He installed all the sculptures in Port Warwick, and came back to install the new bases.

- Who works with scrap material? _____
- What, according to the artist, does the fish represent?
_____
- Which artist has lived in Japan, Italy and New York?
_____
- Who was thinking about the combination of nature and man together? _____

What do YOU think? What stories and shapes do you see?

What is the first thing you noticed? What is the tenth? What does the sculpture feel like when you touch it? Why do you think the figure is holding a fish? What story would you tell? What does it feel like to walk through "Lenape Gate"? What about "Melpomene" suggests that she is the muse of tragedy?